BONERS, MOANERS, AND GROANERS!

For more than thirty years I have taught those darling little children in the grade schools. It has been necessary for me to give them examinations on what they should have studied and should have learned. Sometimes, the examination is written. Other times, it is oral. I also have to ask them questions about what they are doing. One thing is certain: if teacher is not clear in pronouncing a word or doesn't make the meaning clear of a thought, those little kids will give you unusual answers. The kids always enjoyed trying to catch teacher with a riddle or puzzle. Or find something that the teacher doesn't know. How happy a boy or girl is when this has been accomplished.

One of my biggest boners concerned a kid called Morris. It all took place on a Monday morning. Maybe I didn't feel too well and I should have remained home. Anyway, Morris comes into the classroom all dressed up in a western outfit. Seems, as I later learned, that his uncle gave it to him as a present. He was wearing a gun belt with two holsters, and in each was a toy cap pistol. First thing Kid Morris did was to take out those two guns and yell at the top of his voice:

"I'm the toughest hombre this side of the Rio Grande. You do what I tell you, or I'll shoot up the class."

That was all I needed from him for my frayed nerves. I reached for the big ruler on my desk and started towards him. They say I said the following to him:

"Get out, and get lost! I take nothing from a tin-horned kid cowboy. Now get out, and get lost! You heard me."

So Kid Morris ran out as though the devil was behind him, and I continued with taking the class attendance and beginning the morning lessons. Came noon recess, the class went home and I went to the teacher's cafeteria. I was almost finished when the principal, Dr. Herman Goodman, came up to me.

"Mrs. Baumgarten called on the phone. Her son Morris hadn't come home yet. She's worried. When did he leave your room?"

I turned deadly pale. I could hear my heart beat. What could I do? What could I say? If anything happened to that kid, it would be all my fault. Then the assistant principal rushed over to the principal. What I didn't know was that Mr. Baumgarten was City Corporation Attorney. In five minutes he had half of the police force out looking for his kid. I could hardly teach the rest of the afternoon. By three o'clock, I learned the details of what had happened.

Kid Morris took my words to heart. He beat it out of school and headed up Broadway just in time to see a parade. He got in front of it, and it went to the Ritz-Marlin Hotel. A convention was in town. They thought that Kid Morris had been sent there to liven up things. So they took him to the grand ballroom. He had lunch there. The news photographers took his picture. By one thirty, the police found him. Mr. Baumgarten went to get his son. He, too, had his picture taken. He was praised on what a wonderful son he had. It was all good free publicity. So somewhere along the line of life, they forgot to scold me.

Kids can come back with answers that you could never in your life anticipate. Marvin looked as though he was in dreamland. So, I called his name and then asked this question:

"Marvin, I want you to tell the class just what is the difference between a book worm and an earthworm?"

That question certainly shook him up. He actually put his hand to his chin, and then a smile appeared on his face.

"That's an easy one, teacher. Glad you called upon me. I know a real bookworm. My uncle is a real bookworm. He would rather read books than eat. Now, I will tell you the difference. An earthworm would rather eat than read books. That means it is the other way around. Correct?"

Know something? I was stuck. The class laughed; and then I told him as far as I knew his answer was correct, and I was giving him a mark of 100% for that answer. When I went home, I thought a lot about his answer. So, I wrote it out and sent it to a magazine. Two weeks later, I received a check for three dollars. I sent for Marvin's mother and gave her the check to spend for Marvin. She was so proud, and of course, so was Marvin.

"I know lots more jokes," he told me. "Maybe we can go into business together?"

When Nina came to school three consecutive days late, I wanted to know what caused the delay.

"I have to wash myself," she said. "Takes me twenty minutes."

"I also have to wash myself," I replied. "But it takes me only five minutes."

"I could do it in five minutes," she replied, "if I didn't have to wash my ears, behind my ears, and also my neck."

Next time, more about what has happened in my classroom.
